Mystery genre brings together writer's two loves

DARREN LUM
County Life Staff

Canadian mystery novelist Barbara Fradkin was singing the praises of the library at the Friends of the Haliburton County Public Library Gala on Sunday, Oct. 27 at Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre in Haliburton.

The Montreal-born writer who is based in Ottawa became passionate about reading and writing at a young age. She remembers moving through towers of books in her childhood home in the 1950s. Her father, who was a philosophy professor at McGill would regularly come home with all kinds of books he bought. So many, he was often constructing new bookshelves to hold them all.

Her busy working mother would leave her at the library after school and on weekends, which is where Fradkin developed her love for libraries and the opportunities for discovery they present.

The retired physiologist and multiple award-winning author's first work was published in 1995, but her writing started at age six.

"I was a very imaginative kid, who daydreamed at the back of the class and had imaginary friends and soon as I could spell I wrote those stories down," she said.

Mystery writing is an ideal genre for her, considering her background and passion.

"I discovered it was a perfect marriage for me – crime fiction – between my love of psychology and my love of writing. Mysteries get a bit of a bad rap. Everybody reads them, but then they think this is a guilty pleasure of mine, but actually they are one of the oldest forms in one fashion or another of a moral tale. They are the fight between good and evil and the quest for justice. I think that's why they endure," she said. She is best known for her novels featuring Inspector Green.

Canadian author Barbara Fradkin reads from her book, Prisoners of Hope, at the 14th annual Friends of the Haliburton County Public Library Gala and Silent Auction on Sunday, Oct. 27 at the Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre in Haliburton./DARREN LUM Staff

Libraries provide information that is important to the research of her novels. Although she appreciates what can be found online, including the first-person accounts on YouTube videos, she said online searches can be misleading.

"The reality is libraries have the richness and depth and breadth of material that we just don't get on the internet easily without hunting and hunting, following link after link. And if you're lucky you find what you need," she said.

Fradkin's most recent novel is Prisoners of Hope, which features 30-something international aid worker Amanda Doucette. She said the Doucette mystery series is set in iconic Canadian places and serves as "an homage to Canada." It helps bring her readers to places in Canada they may have never heard of or where they have never visited.

Before Fradkin spoke, Friends of the HCPL president Elly Malcomson thanked her for attending the gala, which raises money for the local library system. She said "the Haliburton County Public Library contributes to our community and touches people's lives in many ways. It is a bridge to technological innovation; a gateway to learning; a one-stop shop for entertainment; a centre of research; an economic stimulator; a key source for community information; a welcoming place for people of all ages to gather."

The Friends' financial support is essential to the purchase of e-books, book club sets, award listed books and large type books, including funding technology such as laptops and iPads to enable the library to conduct group sessions to learn how to download.

The major aim of the Friends this year is to fund the purchases of e-books for the HCPL, she said.

The Friends are a support group, which advocates for all library branches in Haliburton County. It helps to raise funds to assist with developing library facilities and services.

Fradkin said she appreciated the invite to the gala and also thanked Master's Book Store owner Kathy Stouffer for connecting her with the Friends of the HCPL.

"Book sellers and libraries are an author's bread and butter. Without readers and bookstores and libraries, we'd be whistling in the dark or we'd be in our attic bemoaning our fate," she said.

Self-published author welcomes readers to Bolfodier

DARREN LUM
County Life Staff

Nick Sutcliffe, a Carnarvon resident, is proud of his first self-published fantasy novel, The Kanta Chronicles. He called the novel the greatest accomplishment of his life. /DARREN LUM Staff

Nick Sutcliffe said The Kanta Chronicles represents the greatest accomplishment in his life.

The Carnarvon resident's epic debut novel is set in the fictional world of Bolfodier and spans two generations, focusing on the lives of four members of the House of Kanta "as each tries to survive the trials of leadership, destiny and love," according to the author's website.

Bolfodier is set apart from our world through the element of magic, how the sun rises in the north and sets in the south, days are 25 hours long, there are 14 months in a year, each month is 30 days long, and the farther north one travels, the warmer it gets and the opposite occurs the farther south one travels.

Originally from Alliston, Ont., the 26-year-old Windsor University drama graduate moved to the Highlands because of a family cottage on Lake Kashagawigamog.

He lives in Carnarvon with his brother and works at Minden Valumart. His books can be found next to the cash registers at the grocery store, which is located at Highway 35 and Water Street. It can also be purchased online at Amazon, and Indigo.

The Chronicles started as an epic poem he wrote to pass the time in Grade 11 biology. His inspiration was a friend who turned the 16-week NFL season into poetry.

"It made it seem like a lot more like epic wars than the 16 weeks of games that it actually is," he said. "He read the piece to the class and it was like you know what? I want to do something like that."

It wasn't until a year later in Grade 12 when he started to write it out into prose, completing the first part. He took some time off from it, but two years later in university he finished writing the last two parts of the book.

Fiction was a form of escape for him in high school.

His blog says he "led the life of the typical high school loser. This in turn led him to delve into reading and writing fantasy as a means to escape the mundane boredom of daily life."

His influences include trivia, entertainment, history, religion and mythologies.

The self-described "metal head" said music is a constant companion while he writes in the evening hours after dinner. His bands of choice include Motley Crue and Nightwish, a Finnish symphonic metal band.

The Chronicles were published more than two years ago and isn't the only thing he's written.

Next to be published is Lucifier and Lilith. The next project he is working on is Supernatural Mortem.

Sutcliffe loves writing because of "the freedom of it." He said it allows him to live out what he can imagine and serves as an "emotional preeminent catharsis to my loneliness."

None of this would be possible without his parents, he said.

They are at the top of the thank you page listed in his novel. He credits them for always being supportive of his artistic endeavours and for helping distribute his book to people.

His advice for other people who are interested in writing is to not compromise your story for anyone and stay true to your work.

"Be brave and take the first step. Put yourself out there to be published," he said.

Part of his process includes posting his work online and reading the comments or feedback.

When people ask for more, it drives him to continue.

"It boosts my morale and gives me the extra confidence to go out there and say I want to officially publish this so more people can see it and fall in love with it," he said.

Learn more about the book and stay up to date with Sutcliffe through his blog at www.bolfodier.ca.

Away they go
Members of CARP chapter 54 from Haliburton were up early on Thursday, Oct. 31, ready to climb aboard the coach bus headed for Toronto to see Come From Away. The musical is about 7,000 airline passengers stranded in Gander, Nfld. following the Sept. 11 terror attacks in 2001. Air traffic was grounded and the passengers were taken in by area residents, who demonstrated great hospitality and caring for their unexpected guests. /DAVID ZILSTRA Staff

Hold on to your hats ... Irish Mythen in concert

"I had no idea what to expect when this five-foot-nothing lady took the stage, all smiles and twinkling eyes and guitar. Then, she opened her mouth and out flew a voice that came straight from the Heavens…" That is singer-songwriter Irish Mythen, as described by Lisa Schwartz of the Philadelphia Folk Festival. An incredible night of music awaits as this powerhouse performer comes to the Haliburton Highlands, performing a solo concert on Saturday, Nov. 9, 7:30 p.m. at the Highland Hills United Church in Minden.

Irish Mythen was born in Ireland and now calls Charlottetown, P.E.I. home. She has performed at festivals around the world and has released three full-length albums and two EPs. She is, by vote, one of the three most requested artist to return to the Mariposa Folk Festival….after Joni and Gordon!

This is show No. 2 of the 2019-20 Concert Series hosted by the Haliburton County Folk Society. Local musicians Jacob Outram and Scott Duggan will do an opening set.

Irish Mythen is a performer not to be missed! Be prepared for a performance that is full of wild emotion as she pours her heart and soul into every word she sings. You will be left in awe of her vocal talent, and remembering the show, songs and performer long after you've walked away.

Tickets are still available but selling fast. Find them online at www.haliburtonfolk.com or in Minden at On the Spot Variety and Haliburton at Halco/The Source. Adults $25, students and HCFS members $20. $30 at the door.

Remembering Remembrance Day, don'tcha know

THERE WE WERE, ol' Maybelle and my good friends, Beanpole Starkman, Sybil Beaucannon Hughes, Officer Stanley Penelope McBottom, Twindle Mumbly and Vilma Yucch, sitting in front of a nice warm fire in my cottage living room (boy, was it ever blustery outside), enjoying a hot cuppa tea and yummy apple pie baked by the Lake WhaddayathinkImean church ladies, when we all started remembering Remembrance Day, don'tcha know.

Maybelle's

Fireside stories

"People around the world," said Twindle, "commemorate the armistice agreement that ended the First World War on Monday, Nov. 11, 1918, at 11 a.m. … on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month every year."

"That's right, smarty-pants," said Beanpole, being Beanpole-crusty. "Our fallen soldiers who were in the Second World War and the Korean War."

"And don't forget the war in Afghanistan," Officer McB piped in.

"And, how about the peace-keeping missions in other military engagements," said Sybil in her Tier One dyed-in-the-wool British accent.

"Over a million-and-a-half Canadians served in Canada's armed forces," I said, "and 100,000 died in foreign conflicts."

"One hundred EIGHTEEN thousand, Maybelline," Sybil said.

"Why, Sybil," I said, "if you aren't our very own Encyclopedia BRIT – anica!"

"Ha-ha, Maybelline," she said (that's what she often calls me). "As chairperson of the Lake WhaddayathinkImean Historical Society, I am expected to know these things. And while we're on the subject, who needs a poppy?"

And like magic, a cardboard box filled to the brim with red Remembrance Day poppies suddenly appeared on my big ol' maple coffee table.

"I already have one," said Twindle, his mouth full of apple pie. "But, I'll buy one more … pin it to my other winter jacket."

"And I'll take half a dozen …" said Office McB. "…hand them out to the guys and gals at the precinct." He said this with a proud puffed out chest which made Vilma's baby blues glow with super sweet diabetes-making love at her forever sweetheart.

"I take another one, too," Vilma said. "Important remembering all of them."

Officer McB patted her on the head like a puppy.

"Well … I love the history of the red Remembrance Day poppy," I said.

"You see, the red poppy grew on the First World War battlefields of Flanders in Belgium and northern France. The seeds of the flower can remain dormant in the earth for years, and will blossom in abundance when the soil is disturbed. So, as the artillery barrages began to churn the earth in late 1914, the fields of Flanders and northern France saw scores of red poppies appear, don'tcha know."

"You don't say!" said Twindle, now starting on his second piece of pie.

"And might I add, Maybelline," said Sybil. "The poem, 'In Flanders Fields' was written during the First World War by Canadian physician Lieutenant-Colonel John McCrae." And, as if on cue, she grabbed a piece of paper from the poppy box and recited:

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.
We are the dead: Short days ago,
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved: and now we lie
In Flanders fields!"

Vilma's eyes filled with tears. "I just wish all peoples in the world loved each other."

"Yes, Vilma," I said. "Seems we need a miracle … a consciousness raising, heart-opening potion to make us all realize how precious life is so that we can finally stop adding names to those we remember in silence every November the 11th."

Maybelle's Fireside Stories is written by Jerelyn Craden. Jerelyn's novel, "Vessie Flamingo Outshining the Moon," is available at amazon.com

Top 10 things to like about snow

SNOW IS A wonderful thing, but unless you love snowshoeing or skiing, this is easy to forget. With that in mind, I'd like to offer 10 reasons why snow is great.

1. You can finally hang white underwear on the clothesline inconspicuously.
2. Snowshoes finally look appropriate.
3. It's still the easiest thing to build an igloo with.
4. Makes surrendering with a white flag a lot more challenging.
5. It's perfect if you love furnace trivia.
6. It reveals the wonder and splendor of winter as you get in your car and drive south.
7. We all look fat in parkas.
8. Much easier to collect a urine sample from a snow bank.
9. No more nudists till spring.
10. Finally, an excuse to put a whisky flask around your dog's neck.

Pause

Sun swallowing the wafer of Moon, dangling up in Sky,
above a tangle of branches ,scalped by Wind, exposing smudges of nests, hollow as shadows, perched in the crooks of trees,
the curtain of leaves, fraying more each day,
as the spaces between branches swell with light.
Sun washing over every twig, every sprig that sprouts from its burl,
each leaf that still gleams on its strand of tree,
like a jewel,
the rest of the necklace, scattered on the ground, veiling the trail, where I pause, to feel the crisp stillness of Air, between gasps of Wind, my fingers grasping at the reeds, that fringe
the strip of marsh,
bleached the colour of wheat,
their shadows sharp as knives, slicing the leaves curling beneath my feet.
I stare down into the white orb of Sun, blazing in the water,
rounder than the one beaming up in Sky,
its brightness magnified by the blackness of marsh,
pooling around it,
the depth of the light, drawing me in, blotting thoughts from my mind, my eyes, skittering from grass to rock to reeds to trees,
how the same Sun that warms my cheeks and neck,
warms the bones of birches flanking the trail,
their shadows entangled with the shadows of reeds,
that begin to sway on the trail,
as a gust of Wind blows, scattering leaves, shattering the orb of Sun that glows in the strip of marsh, blinding its light.
I gaze up at the blur of nests, tiny as burrs, nestled in their branches, wondering whether they've been abandoned, like trees by their leaves.
I don't know how long I've been standing here,
how many heartbeats or how many breaths,
only that I don't want this moment to pass, glistening like the granite pebble I pluck from the ground and hold in my palm, this feeling of being curled in a nest of light and Wind,
my shadow entangled with the shadows of trees and reeds,
leaves drifting through Air, not knowing where they'll land.
I hold out my hand, watching as a leaf falls on the shadow of my arm.
I make my way along the trail, accompanied by birches and reeds,
leaving the leaf be, to bask with the others in a puddle of Sun.

Insights help plan Head Lake Park design

SUE TIFFIN
County Life Staff

Stakeholders at a Head Lake Park master plan workshop held Oct. 23 had a lot to say when sharing what they love about the Haliburton outdoor space, including the bandshell, the natural vegetation and pathways, the location and view, the playground and the event space. But those who have used it for many years were also quick to point out what they've noticed could be improved, including better drainage, washroom conditions, parking spaces, wayfinding signage and an added splash park.

The group of stakeholders representing the park's diverse infrastructure and events were invited by the Municipality of Dysart et al for the improvements workshop moderated by Basterfield & Associates Landscape Architects – retained by the municipality to prepare a Head Lake Park master plan.

The participants included representatives of service clubs, the Farmers' Market, Rails End Gallery, the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association, the Haliburton County Public Library, the county's Joint Accessibility Advisory Committee, the health unit, the BIA, the Athwart Hearts music festival, the Caboose tourist information and welcome centre, parks grounds contractors and staff and council. Smaller groups of people at the session worked together in brainstorming and answering questions regarding which features of the park were most valued, what features could be added to the park, what needed improvement, repair or upgrading and which three things were liked least about the park.

Mayor Andrea Roberts thanked the room full of stakeholders, noting, "we couldn't do it on our own."

"Each one of you has a little bit, a little story, a little thought," she said. "You know, I thought [our group] had it and then I heard all from the other tables and I said, 'yeah, that's a good point, that's a good point.'"

Roberts said she looked forward to seeing the master plan, which she acknowledged would take time.

"It will take time to do, but it will be something that you strive for," said Roberts. "Without a plan, you're just putting out those little fires or fixing this little thing over here and not looking at the big picture."

Basterfield & Associates Landscape Architects designed the skate park and arena side parking lot, as well as streetscape projects, so has familiarity with the town. A concept might come back to the same group for further input prior to going to council.

"It is the intention that this plan will help with annual budgeting and planning and also to support grant applications that may come along," said Tamara Wilbee, Dysart et al CAO.

SIRCH offering free lunches starting this month

SIRCH Community Services announced last week that it will again be hosting Lunch Is On Us, a free meal on Thursdays at SIRCH Central at 2 Victoria St. in Haliburton.

"Winter can be tough. Below freezing temperatures, limited sunlight, and higher-than-ever household expenses, can leave you feeling pretty down and alone some days," said Gena Robertson, executive director of SIRCH, in a media release. "Lunch Is On Us lets you meet up with your friends or come and make new ones while having a delicious and healthy lunch at no cost to you."

The program starts Nov. 7 and runs until Feb. 27 each Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. There is no Lunch Is On Us on Boxing Day, Dec. 26.

"Each Thursday, Lunch Is On Us will feature a different menu," Jay McIvor, SIRCH's food initiatives co-ordinator, said. "For example, one week we may serve a hearty chilli with homemade buns, and another we'll serve grilled cheese with bacon and homemade soup – always with a dessert, of course. We can serve 50 to 60 people each week. Meals can be eaten in or taken out."

There is no charge for the lunches, thanks to donations gathered through Gifts from the Heart, a campaign that runs through the holiday season, as well as sponsorships and individual donations.

"It's our way of thanking and supporting the community we live in, and we also are able to offer training opportunities to past graduates of Cook It Up. A donation jar will be available and if you'd like to 'pay it forward' we'd appreciate it, but there is no expectation – we just want people to come out, get warm, connect and have some fun," Robertson said.

For more information about Lunch Is On Us, visit www.sirch.on.ca/lunchisonus or call 705-457-1742.

If you'd like to donate to Gifts from the Heart, which funds Lunch Is On Us as well as many other community programs, go to www.sirch.on.ca/gifts.

Commemorative garden planted at Haliburton cenotaph

To mark the 75th anniversary of the liberation of The Netherlands, the Royal Canadian Legion 129 Haliburton has planted 60 orange and yellow Liberation 75 tulip bulbs and 40 purple grape hyacinth bulbs at the cenotaph in Haliburton.

Symbolism behind the tulip originated in the Second World War when the Dutch royal family sent tulips to Canada as a thank-you for liberating Holland and providing refuge to Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard and their daughters Beatrix and Irene during the war.

Master gardeners Carolyn Langdon and Winnie Kasepchuk as well as Haliburton Legion member Lynn Pitman planted a "Drift of Tulip" garden on Oct. 23. A white stone was also placed at the site. When the garden blooms, the Legion will hold a dedication ceremony and a brass plaque will be added to the stone.

Permission to plant the garden was obtained from the Municipality of Dysart et al and the gardens were prepared for planting by Jim Elstone and staff.

In Flanders Fields

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place: and in the sky
The larks still bravely singing fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.
We are the dead: Short days ago,
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved: and now we lie
In Flanders fields!
Take up our quarrel with the foe
To you, from failing hands, we throw
The torch: be yours to hold it high
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields

Writer, blues aficionado and nature lover: remembering George Farrell

JENN WATT
County Life Editor

George Farrell stands with a selection of his photos from the 2014 exhibition Fatal Abstraction: Images in Rust. He was that year's featured artist at the Annual Members Show at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery in Minden. Farrell was a columnist, novelist, organizer, artist and most recently, became a blues singer. He died on Oct. 17. /DARREN LUM Staff

Friends describe George Farrell as a doer, someone who was interested in the world, other people, new ideas, and when he wanted to get something done, he put his whole self into it.

He organized and promoted the Canadian Blues Legends series at Minden's Dominion Hotel with Shawn Chamberlin; he photographed the relics of old cars, turning them into artwork; he wrote regular columns for several local newspapers; he penned a mystery novel, published and promoted it; and he became the frontman of a blues band.

He did it all with enthusiasm and energy, his friends say, taking great pleasure in all of it.

On Oct. 17, Farrell died at the Haliburton hospital from complications resulting from a brain tumour. He was 74.

"He was one of those guys that was involved in a lot of artistic and creative pursuits in this community," said his friend Sean Pennylegion. "... Anybody that had any contact with the creative world in this community knew George or knew of George."

A longtime columnist for various publications, most recently County Life, where he wrote weekly about arts and culture, Farrell was a regular fixture at county events and particularly good at making connections and finding stories.

"He was always looking for people to engage with and talk to and he was certainly gregarious," said Hugh Taylor, who has known Farrell since they were university students around 1969 or 1970.

They were roommates for a year, back when Taylor attended the University of Toronto and Farrell was at Ryerson, studying radio, television and journalism. They bonded over their love of music and stayed in touch for years until Taylor moved away.

When Taylor and his wife Pamela Marsales moved to the Highlands in 1995, he was thrilled to find Farrell and his wife, Michelle St. Pierre and their sons Brendan and Tyson living here, too.

They picked up right where they left off.

"Over these many years in Haliburton we often went on long walks together accompanied by George and Michelle's remarkable, and kinda crazy dog Weasel, who would almost always cause some kind of emergency, from bear encounters to getting lost in the foundations of a derelict building, chasing a critter," Taylor shared via email.

Most friends of George report that he loved to chat. He wanted to engage with other people and sometimes debate points of view.

Laurie Carmount, curator of the Agnes Jamieson Gallery in Minden, worked with him for 10 years at the Minden Hills Cultural Centre, which includes the gallery. Farrell was assigned to various aspects of the cultural centre, with a particular penchant for Nature's Place.

Over the years, Carmount said they had many spirited conversations.

"He really wanted to come to understand your full reasoning – and you had to support your reasoning – he'd come at you from a couple different ways to see why you're thinking what you're thinking," she said.

Farrell could work at any part of the cultural centre, Carmount said, because he had wide-ranging knowledge and the motivation to learn about new things.

"I think it was mostly because George could speak to any art, any aspects of the centre, history, you name it. .... I could easily have him in any spot. Nature's Place sat really well with him because he had an interest in the nature/environment connection here, the ecological uniqueness," she said. Carmount said she wanted to pass along condolences from the staff at the cultural centre to Farrell's family.

Although he spent a good deal of his early adulthood in Yorkville, chumming around with musicians and running a photography studio, Farrell also had a deep connection to the natural world, which was part of the reason he and St. Pierre chose to relocate to the Highlands in 1988.

The pair met in 1980 and were friends for four or five years before a romance blossomed. St. Pierre said she was attracted to his sense of humour and his irreverence, though, she points out, he was always respectful to others, even when he disagreed.

He had worked in the film industry for a time, and after becoming injured on the job, began working from home more often. He spent hours with his sons at that time helping them with school work and fostering a love of the outdoors.

"He was home a lot so he was very active in the boys' upbringing and very patient," St. Pierre said, recalling his time educating the kids on the birds that came to the feeder and caring for animals, like Sherman the Ermine.

"He loved being in nature, he loved being in the country. Even though he'd been a city person, his true self was being in nature," she said.

More recently, Farrell's attention was placed on music, in particular the blues. For nine years, he worked with Shawn Chamberlin, owner of the Dominion Hotel in Minden, on the Canadian Blues Legends series. He brought his connections from the Yorkville days, helping to select and book major talent.

"He knew these guys from seeing them play in their early years," Chamberlin said. "They all went on to become quite famous and popular … this was an opportunity to reconnect with them for George."

Taylor marvels at the names he brought in – some of the very best in the province – including Lance Anderson, Teddy Leonard and Danny Mark.

Farrell would get up on the Dominion stage to introduce them, telling jokes and sharing stories. "When I think of George, that's a big part of the image that comes to mind," Taylor said. "George on the stage there introducing these wonderful musical acts."

St. Pierre said she and the family have been overwhelmed by the support from the Highlands community during George's illness and following his death.

"The community has been wonderful. I don't think he realized how much he was loved and appreciated and how many lives he touched. It's been remarkable," she said.

A celebration of life will be organized this spring.

SIRCH offers programming for moms and moms-to-be

From now until mid-December, SIRCH Community Services invites moms-to-be and mothers with babies and toddlers to drop by Moms+ (MomsPlus) in either Wilberforce or Minden.

"We know that sometimes, especially as winter is approaching and bills are going up, that expectant mothers, new moms, and moms with small children may feel isolated or just want to share their experiences and learn from others," said Margee Shelly, CAPC/CPNP co-ordinator at SIRCH Community Services. "Moms+ is brand new and it will be an inviting and informal place to come and enjoy tasty foods while making crafts and meeting other women with lots in common. Moms+ will be fun for kids too, so moms should feel comfortable bringing their small children."

Drop by Moms+:

Wilberforce: Any time between 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. at Lloyd Watson Centre, 2249 Loop St, on Thursday, Nov. 7, Thursday, Nov. 21, and Thursday, Dec. 5, 2019

Minden: Any time between 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. at St. Paul's Anglican Church, 19 Invergordon Ave, on Thursday, Nov. 14, Thursday, Nov. 28, and Thursday, Dec. 12, 2019.

"Moms+ is an extension of our Special Delivery Club, funded through the Canada Prenatal Nutrition Program," said Gena Robertson, SIRCH's executive director. "Since 1996, the Special Delivery Club has often been a lifeline to expectant women, mothers and infants across Haliburton County by introducing them to resources, making peer connections that often result in lifetime friendships, and providing support. While we do bring moms from all over the county to our weekly groups in Haliburton, for a short time this fall, we are able to bring Moms+ directly into Highlands East and Minden Hills."

Help with transportation may be available. For more information, contact SIRCH Community Services at 705-457-1742 or text Margee at 705-455-2413.

WE DON'T BREW OUR BEER FOR THE AWARDS.

BUT HE DOES!

Our brewmaster, Andrew Kohnen, threw away a successful career in logistics to pursue his dream of reconnecting with the brewing roots of his family. This carried him to the UK's prestigious Brewlab in Sunderland, England, where he procured the alchemy that would drive his signature brewing style.

He took what he could from there and ventured to Scotland, Cornwall, and ultimately to Krefeld, Germany, working in the same brewery that had belonged to his ancestors. He came home to Canada for Hockley.

You could call it dumb, but we call it destiny.

Significant progress

Amalgamation of AH&M, Lutterworth and Snowdon moving ahead

by Jerry Grozelle

The three reeves of the south-western townships of Haliburton County left the amalgamation meeting last week feeling positive about the exercise. Although the meeting didn't draw the public attention of the previous meeting, they all agreed that considerable progress was made.

"It went very well," said Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Jeanne Anthon. "We tried to address the issues that were highlighted at the last meeting."

The reeves and council members from Anson, Hindon and Minden, Lutterworth and Snowdon talked about the ward system, agreeing that a separate ward for the Village of Minden was not necessary. The system would reduce the number of elected officials from the current 15 to 7.

Anthon pointed out that there are no defined boundaries for the village and if a separate ward for Minden were deemed necessary, the process of defining the boundaries would be necessary.

"It wouldn't be carved in stone," she pointed out. "Future councils could make changes. We want to keep everything straightforward."

It has been generally agreed that reserves from the current municipalities would remain within the corresponding wards of the new municipality. Under that scenario, reserves for such events as Minden's Canada Day and Timbersport Festival would remain for those purposes.

Staffing is a very important issue. The committee will get input from the clerk-treasurers of the three municipalities regarding staffing requirements for the new single municipality.

HHSS honours the best and the brightest

It was a day to honour Haliburton Highlands Secondary School's top students. Parents, teachers and relatives gathered at the gymnasium Saturday to witness the annual Honours and Awards Ceremony. In addition to plaques and certificates, some $25,000 in cash awards, bursaries and scholarships was distributed to students at all grade levels to mark their achievements.

For a complete list of award recipients and more pictures from the ceremony, please turn to our special honours section beginning on page 24.

Study confirms impact of college

by Ariel White

Sir Sandford Fleming College officials consider the school to be a "major economic force" in Haliburton County. That is one of the key findings of an economic impact study released recently. The creation of jobs through the college, the Job Connect program and the economic spin offs related to the Haliburton School of Fine Arts is huge, according to SSFC President Brian Desbiens.

The economic impact study was reviewed by the Board of Governors at its meeting held at the Haliburton campus October 6. The study, conducted by Dr. Thomas Phillips, of the college, reports that the School of Fine Arts and its students added nearly $1.5 million to the local economy.

Although the majority of classes are offered only during summer months, their presence brings in some 2300 student weeks. College expenditures amount to some $300,000 for the School of Fine Arts as well as an annual job equivalent of nearly 100 full time seasonal jobs. There were about 250 students enrolled in the 1998-99 year in courses during the remainder of the year.

"This is a huge amount," said President of SSFC, Brian Desbiens, who has also attended the School of Fine Arts in the summer months. "That is a fairly large number of jobs for such a small community."

The Haliburton campus employs 12 full time staff and three part time, to help run the facility. The college also employs a large number of instructors.

The study also notes that the Job Connect program, run through Sir Sandford Fleming College, has generated great financial incentives to employers in the area, and in turn gener-
